BELUSE THE BEAR

By Lucas Joseph Moll
Once upon a time there was a bear named Beluse. He lived in a little grotto in a sculpture park. He was a happy bear because he loved being nice to others.

But Beluse had a problem.

Creatures were scared of him because he was big and fierce.
Because he was so scary looking, he had to play by himself a lot. He would hide behind the ball sculpture until it was sunset.

That is when people left the sculpture park.
First, he went bowling. He used the balls and knocked the big, red sculpture down.
After that, he carried the big red sculpture and hit the egg sculpture. POW!
After he did that, he surfed on the red sculpture down the creek.
Then, he stood on top of the temple sculpture.

He jumped so high he landed in the park bathrooms.

Since he was there he went potty.
Then he saw a new deer sculpture.

He decided to go on a ride on it.

and it came to life.
The deer figured out that the bear wasn't that scary and they decided to play in the sculpture park together every day.

The end.